ARGUMENTS FOR TESTING CATTLE IN M'KEAN CO.

A test recently concluded by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, traced tuberculosis in a child directly to cattle. This particular child was but eight months old and had been drinking milk from a cow which in a tuberculin test reacted. Medical authorities estimate that 25 per cent of all tuberculosis can be charged to the tuberculoud cow. In our own county at Port Allegany, the mother of a four month old calf reacted and was killed. Two months later the calf reacted and the tuberculosis were found along the whole elementary tract, where the milk had come in direct contact. This alone would warrant everyone in supporting the clean-up campaign.

From a financial standpoint, it means this: That the livestock of McKean County will be so much in demand that they will sell for a premium. The testing done in the past four or five years has proved that point. Other counties where tests are made, and cattle slaughtered come to McKean County to purchase, to replenish their herds. When all animals are tested this will be true in a larger way. In other words it means a market for all surplus stock. When the county is once cleaned up all highways crossing the McKean county line will be properly posted by the Bureau of Animal Industry stating that McKean county is clean of tuberculosis and it is unlawful for anyone to take over the highway, into McKean county any cattle unless tested. Such posting of the highways will give us advertistment like that for which corporations would be glad to pay five or six thousand dollars. Under this plan cattle of the county will need to be tested but once in three years instead of once each year.

Some are afraid that they will get no indemnity. This is not true because the testing would not be done were there not money with which to pay for the animals slaughtered. The amount paid for the animals will be their market value so that the cattle owner will not be asked to stand a loss. He gets the carcass and hide and up to as much as $65 for grades and $125 for purebreds.

Every cattle owner in McKean county will be given an oportunity through our plan of organization to help make McKean county free from all tuberculosis.

The next issue will contain detailed plans for the campaign.

GLASS TRADE EXPECTS BOOM IN SPRING

National Glass Budget: Little can be said concerning the window glass industry this week. Everybody is marking time until the winter weather is passed. Manufacturers say that they are booking many orders for single carload business. No change has taken place in the production column. All of the hand plants with the exception of one or two that will operate this winter and spring, have started up.

The plate glass situation continues practically unchanged. One plant closed down recently for cold repairs otherwise production is the same. Demand continues at a satisfactory pace from the manufacturers viewpoint.

A resolution endorsing the Mellon tax reduction plant and urging its early passage without modification, was adopted Thursday by the Associated General Contractors of America, in session at Hotel LeSalle, says the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

It is a policy of the association not to take sides in political issues. The conclusion was reached, however, that the Mellon plan is not a partisan matter, but is a measure which vitally affects the prosperity and financial stability of the nation.

Another resolution opposing any material changes in the Transportation act, until it has had an opportunity to be thoroughly tested was was passed.

The Lafayette Glass Company at Clarksburg, W. Va., is reported to have increased its capital from $150,000 to $250,000, in accordance with a decision reached by the stockholders recently. This action was taken, says the Manufacturers Record, to enable the Company to install four Hilton window glass drawing machines. This will give a capacity of near 1,500 boxes of glass a week. 2 28

I will be at polling place on Feb. 19,20, 1924 from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. for the purpose of enrolling voters who have not been enrolled for Spring primaries.

MARY L. BISETT

Mrs. Mary L. Bisett passed away Tuesday morning at 2:55 o'clock in the Bradford hospital. She had been ill for the past four months, had undergone several operations and was in a very much shaken condition sometime before the end, but her strong will power and faith in her ultimate recovery were such strong factors that hope for her recovery was held until a short time before her death. Her sister Mrs. Maagaret Barker who has been her constant companion through her long illness was with her to the last.

Mrs. Bisett was born on the O'Reilly farm about three miles from this place. Her parents were Michael and Margaret O'Reilly. Bisett of Bradford, May 22, 1889 who preceded her to the great beyond a number of years ago.

She was in business here for about twenty years, selling out and leaving here to live with her son Merill in Tulsa Oklahoma, four years ago. Since then she has spent her summers here.

She was a member of St. Elizabeth's church and Aid Society and the Traveler's club of this place.

Sunny tempered and kind hearted she numbered her friends by the score, beloved in her home and family, her passing leaves many sad hearts.

WILL SURVEY ROAD BETWEEN LARABEE AND PORT ALLEGANY

Port Allegany Reporter-Argus:—It is very probable that the survey of the Larrabee road will be begun in a few weeks, and that the contract for this road will be let within a few months. This is indicated by a letter from Paul Wright, Secretary of Highways, to the Allegheny River Good Roads Association, in response to a letter from the Association asking for early action on this road in order to avoid a very bad detour which would be necessary if the road was not completed by winter. The detour mentioned being the road on the west side of the river to Turtle Point and across Champlain Hill to Coryville. It was pointed out that this road would make a fine detuor until wet weather set in, but after that the steep hill, and other parts which are low, would make traffic very bad.

The following reply was received Wednesday morning from Highway Commissioner Wright: "Replying to your letter of January 28th, I wish to advise you that the section of Routes Nos. 100 and 210 to which you refer have been authorized for survey and it is expected that District engineer H. E. Kloss of Erie, Pa., who handles our work in McKean county, will shortly be able to place a corps on this survey. We fully expect to be able to advertise this project during the early part of this year and appreciate your reasons for expeditious construction on these lines. It is the constant endeavor of the Department to eliminate as far as possible, any inconvenience to the traveling public, and we hope that the work may be so planned as to minimize this inconvenience during our construction work between Port Allegany and Larrabee."

NEW DRY CLEANING ESTABLISHMENT

Rules of Department of Health Are Laws

"Since the Department of Health of Pennsylvania was created by an act of the Legislature, any of their rulings have the same force as an enacted law." Section 2 of their ruling made April 4, 1923 reads as follows:

Section 2.—The sale, offering for sale, giving away or having same in possession for the purpose of sale, by any person or persons, firm or corporation, for human consumption of milk from cow or cows not physically examined and tuberculin tested as prescribed in Section 1 of this regulation is prohibited, except when such milk has been pasteurized.

The campaign against bovine tuberculosis which the Farm Bureau is carrying on, is a most commendable one and when the measures advised are in effect should be a great safe guard against the dread disease being communicated to human beings.

NEARBY TOWNS TO HAVE NURSE

From now on Crosby and Colegrove are to have the services of a professional community nurse. Mrs. N. W. Heinemann and W. H. Gallup of Crosby, who have been working for these results for some time, have secured the services of Miss Caroline Putnuam of Crosby, a nurse whose record is a fine one, and who has spent some time in Bellevue hospital, New York City, to take the position. The plans for financing the arrangement are these: that those who are able to pay for the services of the nurse do so, and those who are not will receive them free of charge. Any deficit in her salary will be made up by the Heinemann Chemical company, The Heinemann Gas Co., and the Crosby Gas Co.

The community nurse is one of the most needed and most appreciated if public servants. She is ever ready with her trained skill to aid in case of sickness. Her value cannot be overestimated. Crosby and Colegrove are to be congratulated.

RIDGWAY HAS A $50,000 FIRE

Ridgway, Feb. 11.—Fire discovered about 5 o'clock this morning by Miss Maude Healey, moving picture censor in the Odd Fellows building, a three story brick structure on Main street gave the fire deparment a stubborn fight and resulted in damage of close to $50,00.

Miss Healey, who has rooms in the Powell Block adjoing the damaged structure, was awakened by the noise of an explosion and upon investigating found the flames pouring from the Odd Fellow building. It is surmised that a gas explosion occurred in the basement in a room occupied by the New Monarch Pool room which concern also occupied a room on the first floor of the building.

The flames seemed to shoot clear to the roof of the building within a very few minutes and the firemen had to flood the interior with many tons of water before the fire was extinguished. As a mater of fact not much damage was done to the building by the fire but the contents were so thoroughly drenched that much property was ruined.

Among losers are the New Monarch Pool Room, the proprietor of which, Howard Ellinger in now in Attica, N. ., for the purpose of disposing of some of his surplus pool tables; the Lauder Shoe company; the Knights of Malta, whose social rooms were damaged; Dr. Flower, a dentist; the Odd Fellows, who occupied the entire third floor as a lodge room and social rooms; John McMackin, who had a barber shop in the basement.

The building is owned by the Ridgway Lodge of Odd Fellows and J. S. McGinnis.

ARTHUR CRABB BADLY INJURED IN POWER HOUSE

Arthur Crabb, the 19 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Crabb of Rixford, was seriously injured last evening at about 6:30 o'clock while working on the Cotton Love and McKallip lease on Columbia hill at Rixford. The young man was alone at the time of the accident so that the details of the occurence are not altogether known at this time. He was found lying unconscious on the floor of the power house by his younger brother, Melvin Crabb, who works on the same lease.

Melvin walked into the power house and was horrified to find his brother lying on the floor unconscious.

He hurriedly shut down the engine and liberated his brother from the machinery in which he was caught and then hurried for help going to the Leser Cohn lease, nearby. There he found several oil men and they carried the injured man to a tool house where he was made as comfortable as possible.

Dr. Phillips of Rixford was summoned to the lease to care for him, and later he was removed by Koch's & Oxley's ambulance to the Bradford hospital. It was found that the young man has a fractured skull and a broken arm.

It is the supposition that Arthur Crabb was cleaning the snow from the belt running from the gas engine to the power, and that he became caught in the belt and was thrown.

The true facts of the case will not be known, however, until Crabb is able to tell them himself as there was no eye witness to the unfortunate accident. The patient knew his parents when they visited him at the hospital this morning.—Bradford Star Feb. 11.

WOMAN AND DAUGHTER IN COUNTY JAIL

Bradford, Feb. 9—Held in $1,000 bail for the next term of criminal court at a hearing before Alderman Foley yesterday, Mrs. Anna Springer of No. 26 South Center street was taken to the county jail last night to await action of the grand jury. She is charged with larceny in connection with the alleged attempt to appropriate $175 found in a pocketbook which her daughter, Venus, is said to have taken from a counter in the McCreery store Thursday.

Venus Springer, age 15 years, was held for the juvenile court and also was committed to the county bastile last night.

In spite of the testimony given by her daughter who admitted her part in the transaction repeating the story told when she first confessed to taking the pocketbook early yesterday morning. Mrs. Springer continued to deny any knowledge of the money. She denied all responsibility and placed the blame entirely on the 15-year-old girl alleging that she did not know the money had been brought to her house and intimating that her daughter had appropriated and hidden the money where it was late found by the police.

The story told on the witness stand by Venus was corroborated in all its essential details by the testimony of little Margaret Circirello who was with the Springer girl in the McCrory store when the money was taken. All attempts to learn what became of the missing $23—only $152 of the amount in the pocketbook having been recovered—failed. The girl insisted she had turned the entire amount over to her mother while the latter continued to deny any knowledge of the money.

Efforts made by friends of Mrs. Springer yesterday to find bail and to have the amount of bail reduced, failed.

HARD SLEDDING FOR DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Harrisburg, Feb. 9.—Paul D. Wright, secretary of highways, today said it is going to be more difficult for persons whose licenses have been revoked to secure a new license at the expiration of the revocation period.

Hereafter when his period of suspension has expired an applicant must submit the names of three responsible business men who are willing to assume some of the moral responsibility following reissuance of the license. When these names are received the business men will be told that the Highway department feels it has a responsibility to discharge to users of the highways, and that in issuing a driver's license it is licensing the operator of a vehicle which can cause property damage, injury and death. When sober they will be told, the applicant might be perfectly able to operate a motor vehicle, but when intoxicated constitute a serious hazard to life, limb and property. The business man will be asked whether he is willing to assume some of the moral responsibility following the reissuance of a license. He will be asked to advise the Department if the applicant continues to use intoxicating beverages to excess. He will be asked whether the applicant operated a motor vehicle at any time during the period of revocation.

All applications of this kind will be submitted to Secretary Wright who will pass upon them personally.

CLEARS SNOW FROM MAIN STREET WITH TRACTOR AND PLOW

A demonstration of modern ways of clearing streets of snow within a short time was given last night by the C. L. White Motor company which put one of its Fordson tractors, equipped with a snow plow, to work along Main street. It took only a few minutes to clear the street of snow and many passersby along the thoroughfare stopped to watch the ease with which the small tractor piled the snow along the curb, clearing the middle of the road.

Arrangements are being made to have the C. L. White Motor company keep the principal streets of the city clear of snow during the remainder of the winter.—Era 11.

EDITORIAL

THE DEATH OF WOODROW WILSON

Although there was no reason to belive that Woodrow Wilson would ever be a well man again, the announcement that his death was only a question of hours startled the country. There was an instant outburst of sympathy and sorrow, feelings that grew more profound as the inevitable end came. The Greek conception of tragedy was that it should arouse pity and terror. The climax of Mr. Wilson's carerr was tragic enough, and it aroused pity, if not terror, even in the enemies which it was impossible a man of his temperament should not make. His part had been played on the stage of the world, and far beyond the alien seas the final curtain was a shock. In all generous hearts past enmities were silenced by the calm and hallowing presence of death.

It is always futile to anticipate the verdicts of history. Prospectives change with the years. The full truth about any man cannot be known or guessed while he lives; nor can any revelations after death, the memories of friends, the publication of documents, all those things which make biography, show him precisely in his habit as he lived. Nor are comparisons with other men of much value. Each of us, in the Scot phrase, "drees his own weird." Every statesman has his own problems to face, and it is idle to inquire how others would have faced them, or say that Woodrow Wilson lacked courage or strength of will. He had, as he himself admitted something of the stubborn resolution of the Convenanters from whose stock he came. Like Browning, he was "ever a fighter." And he fought in his own way. Whether he might sometimes better have fought in another way does not much matter. He could say consolingly with St. Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

That he will be numbered with the greatest of our Presidents is as certain as anything human can be. He was called to the largest task any of them, with the possible exceptions of Washington and Lincoln, faced, and his was broader in its scope than theirs. He became not merely a national, but an international figure. It would be extravagant to say that at a critical time he held the destinies of America and Europe in his hand, but he at least profoundly affected them. No doubt he estranged many of his countrymen by what seemed paralyzing irresolution in the dark early days of the war. But when he made up his mind that America must go in there was no failure of vigor in his attitude or his acts. His determination to go in that gathering of men of world wide renown he was the chief figure. Whatever mistakes he may have made, whatever opportunities he may have missed, this destinction was his.

That he undertook too much, his sudden physical collapse revealed. Perhaps a catastrophe which so softened bitter animosities explains in part the genuine grief his death evoked. It could not be said of him, as Charles V. says of himelf in Von Platen's poem, that he was dead before his death; in all but bodily force he was vividly alive. But in a sense, with his active career so obviously ended, he had already become a part of his country's history. He had become the symbol, as it were, of a cause. He must himself have been dimly conscious of this. "I am ready to go," he said. As a good faithful servant he entered into the joy of his Lord.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

BALDWIN FOR SENATOR

State Senator Frank E. Baldwin of Austin today announces his candidacy for re-election as Senator from the 25th district, comprising the counties of McKean, Potter and Tioga, subject to the decision of the Republican voters at the primaries in April and the election in November. In view of Senator Baldwin's splendid record in the Senate, there is little likelihood of his encountering any opposition in the primaries as the voters of the district realize the direct value of Senator Baldwin's services to the counties he represents. Senator Baldwin is a business man entirely familiar with the various interests of the people he so ably represents.

Oil producers, glass makers and farmers, together with the men who carry on these industries recognize the worth of having a man in the state senate who is more than a figure head and they know that they have a real leader in Senatorial affair in Frank Baldwin.

This district is particularly fortunate in having a man of Mr. Baldwin's ability and influence in the Senate and there is little doubt but that the great majority of the voters realize the fact and will be eager to send him back to the position where he has done such meritorious service.

IF the fellows that boast of knowing so much about radio would learn how to operate single-circuit tuners—how much better his neighbor would enjoy reception. No more harm could be done if he was using a spark coil for transmitting.

QUEST FOR HAPPINESS

"I wouldn't have run away from home if I had been treated like other girls—if I had been allowed to have a little fun. I wanted a little happiness, and I had to go away from home to get it."

These are the words of a sixteen year old girl who ran away from home to the city, was arrested and sent back home.

She was only a slip of a girl, with an innocent face, well educated, honest-hearted.

It is only another of the many, many instances of the sorrowful mistake that both children and parents often make—a mistake which renders impossible that happiness for which we are searching.

The simple story teaches a big lesson.

The home, of all places in the world, ought to be the source of truest happiness to parents and children alike. It ought to be prevailed by an air of perfect confidence and understanding.

But it too often fails in its mission, and its members are driven out into the world on a quest for what they think is happiness.

There is a volume of pathos in the simple statement of this young girl that she wanted happiness and that she had to go away from home to get it.

A STRONG CANDIDATE

In ths issue of the Republican Thomas B. Wilson of Bradford announces his candidacy for Member of Assembly subject to the decision of the Republican voters at the primaries April 22, 1924. Mr. Wilson is widely known to the people of McKean county as an attorney of splendid ability; a staunch worker for the highest ideals of the Republican party; an enterprising citizen with the welfare and material benefit of his city and county at heart and a man of thorough business experience and knowledge of county affairs. There is not the slightest question of his ability to represent McKean county in the General Assembly with intelligence and satisfacton. Mr. Wilson will make a thorough canvass of the county and as he has many friends who will assist him in his endeavor to secure the nomination and election. Mr. Wilson should prove a strong candidate.

KANSANS NEARLY FREEZE TO DEATH IN RAGING STORM

Liberal, Kan., Feb. 5.—Huddled in a Ford coupe, Mr. and Mrs. Nolen Bond, Misses Sarah Snow, Etta Larue and Bessie Kesler, all of this city, almost perished during the blizzard Sunday night. Linemen for the Telephone company found them Monday morning at 9 and took them to a farm house two miles away. They were later brought to this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Bond and Miss Snow were a few miles out of Garden City when the storm struck them. They tried to get out of the drifts and lost their hats and became chilled and wet. Hearing an auto horn, Mr. Bond went to see who might need help and found Miss Etta Larue and Miss Kesler almost frozen in their car some distance away. Miss Kesler was very ill so he carried her and assisted Miss Larue to his car. All three were exhausted and suffered intensely all night. Mr. Bond froze his feet and hands. Had it been very cold the whole party would have perished long before bodies, crowded into the car saver morning. Only the warmth of their them.

The above clipping sent by a daughter of Mrs. W. R. Fulmer of this place, who, lives in Liberal gives an idea of the severity of the blizzard which recently passed through that section.

CHAPTER VII

For her part the new Adelaide Rutherford still stood in the great room where he had left her, still staring at the door through which he had gone, a victim of emotions only less disturbing than his.

There could be naturally little doubt in her mind now of the identity of the stranger. Who could it possibly be but one—this individual with a pass-key, and the private knowledge of her own house which she herself had never dreamed of, and of her own intimate but forgotten past.

She had often thought, naturally, of her husband—of what he must be like, of why she had been separated from him. She had avoided speaking on this subject to Jasper Haig; and he, for purposes of his own no doubt, had mentioned it to her in only a very general way. She had assumed merely that she would not see him; naturally that was one absolute condition of their agreement—one complication which must not arise for her. She could have complained to Mr. Haig now, of course, of this visit, but after seeing him— She paused and thought, remembering her visitor's face—and her own situation, as she saw it now. For her situation, it must be said, was growing more and more disturbing to her.

One must recall, in endeavoring to understand this, that this young woman, this fortunate mistress of the great Gorgam Trust, had—as her own servants could at least partly see—no memory of her past at all back of her recent desperate illness, beyond that supplied by her two visitors—her financial and physical guardians, Jasper Haig and the very celebrated doctor. Considering this, she often, and more and more as time went on, felt the lack of exact and definite information concerning many things around her—even about herself.

She was ill; she appreciated that—a nervous trouble with a long name, which would keep her isolated for a long period. She would see none of the friends of the Adelaide Rutherford of former years. She readily agreed to that. But she had hoped—in fact had been more recently at least partly promised that some time after a sufficient time for recovery, she might be free, by some graceful arrangement, to travel—to see something of the world outside of the interior of this great luxurious house. She grew most weary of this place. It was like, in a way, an imprisonment in a museum: huge, priceless paintings; long, costly draperies; jars worth a fortune—many enough and large enough to hold the Forty Thieves. And no sunlight, except in the afternoon from the west—sunlight being one article apparently that even the Gorgam Trust could not purchase in New York.

She had agreed of course with her doctor and Jasper Haig to all this. Yet even this she could see now must be something that would have an end—a purpose. And now—no doubt from the very situation of loneliness and time for thought in which she found herself, certain suspicions which she had formed took a somewhat monstrous and disconcerting shape. There might be something, she sometimes thought—from various things, from the servants' actions, from her own self-accepted isolation in the house—that she did not exactly know—not only about the Gorgam Trust, but about herself!

She checked herself when such ideas came to her. For it was a black, blind alley in which she had small desire to grope.

The delights of unmeasured wealth and luxury! Who can reasonably question after their universal acceptance as the goal of life for man—and for woman certainly no less—through all the ages, and especially in this? This is a simple matter of common knowledge and belief which everybody knows. On the other hand there are very few who have been in a position to observe and appreciate the strange illogical, almost hysterical effect which close imprisonment has on human nervous systems; to understand the odd outbreaks and panics of hysteria which penologists assure us overtake the most unlikely victims—the most hardened individuals confined in prisons, at entirely unexpected intervals, in involuntary and almost insane paroxysms of self-pity.

Considering this, it is possible to explain, if not to understand, the changed and changing mental attitude of the Gorgam Trust, which, denying her no personal luxury that heart could wish outside of freedom, yet caused her now a growing, sharpening fear, a thing she could not apparently resist, a fear of being an eternal prisoner of illness—a prisoner in solitary confinement for life. She was consumed by a desperate desire to know the truth.

She knew, of course, that her husband would know—would be the one third person to whom she could possibly have access, who would have positive knowledge; and whatever might have been her reason for her separation from him, she certainly had that instinct of confidence which her so-called intuitions often give to women concerning men, in that tolerant kindly face of the man who had come back for some reason, possibly to see her, into the house of Adelaide Gorgam. If worse came to worse, if this sense of ungovernable, blind fear which now and then came over her, should grow too strong, here was a possibility of understanding, of possible clearing-up and escape from that illogical but irresistible terror which she was coming so much to fear.

An attack of such hysteria must, it seems, have come over her within the next few days. In some way, probably through a servant, she must have sent a message to her husband that she would like to see him, to ask a favor.

"This is devilish white of you!" said the slow-eyed, heavy man whom the servant ushered in. He had been drinking, that was evident. Adelaide Rutherford had difficulty in holding back Rags from serious indiscretion against her caller.

"What!" she said, talking against time—her heart in her mouth. He must be some one she knew, then, or the doorman would never have let him in. It was very unpleasant and embarrassing.

"So we were bored stiff, eh?" he asked, throwing off his outer coat. "Well, we won't be any longer."

If Adelaide Rutherford was white at that moment, it was with fear.

"Go away!" she cried, with the simply expressed aversion of a child.

"Go away!" he echoed. "Then what did you send for me for?" he asked, a look of ugly astonishment on his heavy face.

"Nothing, nothing! It was all a mistake!" she cried.

And yet he did not go immediately. He seemed impervious to what she tried to say.

"Listen, sister," he said to her. "Don't get coy. You and I can understand each other yet. I know your kind—and you know mine. I'll just risk a little bet on that."

But when she insisted—to the point of calling in the servants, or loosening the angry Rags upon him—he apparently flew into a rage.

"Now listen," he said again—and his face seemed mottled with anger. "I don't know what your game was in sending for me. But you sent, you know—and I rather like your looks. And moreover, I'm afraid," he said, his face grown suddenly redder, "you don't quite realize your position. There will be no excitement now—at just this time. This thing is staged a little too publicly—the way it has started. But just for you to mull over in your mind, a wife has certain obligations—to be at least agreeable to her husband, if she calls for him especially!"

"I can go," she said, very seriously alarmed, "if you will not! I have had enough of this," she cried hysterically. "I can give this up and leave. I think sometimes I will."

"You haven't tried it yet?" he asked.

"No."

He laughed at that—seemed greatly amused. "No," he went on. "You aren't a lawyer, are you?" he said, jeering at her now quite openly. "You aren't strong on law!"

She watched every blotch and wrinkle in the dissipated face, as it reddened more and more under the double influence of liquor and emotion.

"You aren't a lawyer, are you?" he said.

"You don't know," he went on in a very disagreeable voice, "do you—the exact rights of a woman, judged insane by law, to be at large?

"Good-by," he called to her. "Don't be a fool. Think it over. I shall be back—sometime before long. I'll expect another kind invitation from you—or even introduce myself. It will not necessarily be disagreeable to either of us," he told her with a leer. "And you should remember, too, that I can perhaps get you many little favors, which you haven't now. More freedom, for example; more amusement in your young life. Don't be dull," he said, leaving her. "What's the use, if you don't have to?" And with another still less pleasant smile upon his reddened face, he was gone.

She sank back into the nearest chair.

"Judged insane!" she said aloud.

It fitted in, she saw, with so many little things. It made her just a little faint. He had told her her own fear.

GROWTH OF FLOWERS STIMULATED BY DRUGS

Olean, Feb. 11.—With the use of drugs and carbon dioxide, F. Harrison Higgins, of this city, is speeding up nature.

Mr. Higgins, only son of Frank Wayland Higgns, once governor of New York, is not allowing his flowers any winter sleep. He has a special green house constructed near his home in South street, and by using ether and other drugs is producing larger and more beautiful flowers. The drugs, instead of putting the flowers to sleep, is awaking them, and the carbon dioxide is making them bloom three or four weeks earlier than usual.

Roses are taken from frozen ground and given hypodermic injection of ether sprout and grow and seem immune to all plant diseases.

JOKES

The world is old, yet likes to laugh.
New jokes are hard to find.
A whole editorial staff
Can't tickle every mind.
So if you see some ancient joke
Bucked out in modern guise
Don't frown and call the thing a fake,
Just laugh—and don't be two wise.

Yes, isn't this beastly weather.

This must account for the apparent sleepiness of a few of our students (especially Freshman).

NAME WINNER OF PEACE PRIZE

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—Charles Herbert Levermore of New York, student of international relations, writer and former college professor, tonight was announced as the winner of the $100,000 prize offered by Edward W. Bok Philadelphia publisher for the best plan to preserve peace among the nations of the world.

His identity was disclosed at a public meeting in the Academy of Music under the auspices of the Philadelphia Forum and the Policy Committee of the American Peace Award.

Gets $50,000 Check

As his name dropped from the lips of John V. Davis, Mr. Levermore came forward and received the $50,000 check, representing half of the prize given by Edward W. Bok of Philadelphia. A telegram giving the name of the winner was sent to Mr. Bok who is in Florida.

The winning plan, which was made public January 7, was selected out of 22,165 submitted.

Briefly the plan provides for American participation under certain terms, with a modified league of nations without the United States becoming a member. It also provides for adherance to the world court the Hughes reservations, and for a commission of jurists to codify international law.

Under the Bok award a second $50,000 will be given to the author if and when it is accepted by the United States Senate in its essential parts or it receives substantial endorsement of the country.

In this connection Miss Esther Everett Lape member in charge of the policy committee, said in an address tonight that up to last Sunday night 88 per cent of the ballots received in the national referendum were in favor of the plan. The total vote so far received was 401,183 of which 351,258 were for the plan.

Receive Check

The winner took the prize check and without examining it put it in an inside part of his tuxedo and faced the crowd.

The house rose and applauded Mr. Levermore for a full minute.

They Paid $200,000,000

for Studebaker cars last year

Find out why folks did it

LAST year 145,000 people paid over $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

The demand for these cars has almost trebled in three years. It has become the sensation of Motordom.

There is a new situation in the fine-car field. You should learn what it means to you.

Studebaker had to lead in this field. This concern has led in its lines for two generations. Any other place would be unfitting.

This is how we became the world's largest builders of quality cars.

$90,000,000 assets

Studebaker has $90,000,000 of assets. Of this $50,000,000 is invested in modern plants and equipment.

We have spent $32,000,000 for new plants and equipment during the last five years. So they are modern and efficient. They contain 12,500 up-to-date machines.

We have $8,000,000 in drop forge plants, $10,000,000 more in body plants. So we build complete cars without paying other makers profits.

We spend $500,000 yearly on an engineering staff. There are 125 skilled men employed in our department of Research and Experiment. They make 500,000 tests per year.

We employ 1,200 inspectors. Each Studebaker car must pass 30,000 inspections during manufacture before it leaves the factory.

Those enormous facilities enabled us to produce the utmost in a car. And we had the will to do it.

No stinted costs

We never stint on costs. Every steel used is the best steel for its purpose, regardless of the price.

Then on some steels we pay makers a 15 per cent bonus to insure exactness in them.

Every Studebaker car is Timken-equipped. The Special-Six and the Big-Six have more Timken bearings than any car selling under $5,600 in America. The Light-Six more than any competitive car within $1,000 of its price.

We use genuine leather upholstery.

We use Chase Mohair for the closed car upholstery. Some good upholstery would cost $100 less.

To curb vibration, we machine all surfaces of crank shafts, as was done in Liberty Airplane Motors. Very few cars do that.

How such prices?

How can we give such extra values—scores of them—yet sell at our low prices?

Because these values brought us buyers—145,000 last year. The major extra costs are divided by enormous output.

Let us show you the extras you get, because of these matchless facilities.

Learn Why 145,162 Bought Studebakers in 1923.

Studebakers hold the top place in the fine car field today.
In 1919, the public paid over $80,000,000 for 39,356 Studebaker cars.
In 1920, the public paid over $100,000,000 for 51,474 Studebaker cars, an increase of 31% over 1919.
In 1921, the public paid over $120,000,000 for 66,643 Studebaker cars, an increase of 29% over 1920.
In 1922, the public paid over $155,000,000 for 110,269 Studebaker cars, an increase of 66% over 1921.
In 1923, the public paid over $201,000,000 for 145,162 Studebaker cars, an increase of 32% over 1922.
In 1924, business has opened with Studebaker as never before.

A Valentine
O HEART of me! Dear heart of me!
Though flamed with love your shrine-fires glow,
How can you breathe your ecstasy?
How can you fond devotion show?
The day is here for tender song—
The music of a lover's vow.
To cupid all the hours belong,
'Tis time to whisper secrets now!
—LURANA SHELDON

"Good Morrow To You, My Valentine!"

MANY curious old charms are said to be potent on St. Valentide's eve—all like most charms ever invented, connected with the procuring of husbands. Even before surplus woman dawned on the scene, this seems to have been a subject of much anxiety.

Five bay leaves, pinned respectively to the four corners and the center of the pillow, are said to bring certain dreams of the future partner, if the sleeper has gone to bed without eating or speaking.

Another infallible spell was to write the names of admirers on separate pieces of paper, enclose them in clay balls and throw them into water. The one which came to the surface first contained the name of the fated spouse.

It is a sign of great good luck if the swain you favor should be the first man seen on February 14. The modern girl who does not pin her faith entirely to signs and omens, can always practice the ruse of a shrewd maiden of long ago, who, knowing where her heart had gone, "lay a-bed and shut my eyes all the morning till he came, for I would not have seen another man before him for all the world."

She was far-seeing and lucky. But if she had set eyes first on the wrong man, she would have wedded him; so a poet tells us:—

"Last Valentine, the day when birds of kind
Their paramours with mutual chirpings find,
Afield I went, amid the morning dew,
To milk my kine (for so should housewives do),
Thee first I spied, and the first swain we see,
In spite of fortune, shall our true love be."

Some of us wish that a quaint old custom practiced in the time of Pepys was still prevalent—the rule that a man must give a present to the first woman he saw on February 14. Pepys, gay old rascal that he was, much bewailed himself that his own tribute had to be offered to his wife—a proceeding he considered very dull, when there were plenty of pretty young girls at the light-hearted court of Charles II.

Old people still remember the time when valentines were as popular as Christmas cards, and the postman groaned under his load on the morning of the 14th. This is still the case in the United States, but the idea of courtship is no longer much connected with these bright cards.

Nowadays Shakespeare's greeting:—

"Good morrow, 'tis St. Valentine's day,
All the morning bettime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your valentine."

simply reminds us of the passing of a delightful old custom.

Christianity brought the custom of placing each feast day under the patronage of a saint, and so St. Valentine, who never married himself, became the patron saint of lovers.—The Lady's Companion.

For Your Valentine Party

"GRACIOUS goodness," said Cupid, looking at the calendar, "here I am sitting around and dawdling hours away when it's my busiest time in the whole year." "James," he cried, "bring me that quiver of arrows and the polish. I've got to get ready for St. Valentine's day!"

And while Cupid is busy getting ready for his annual archery program, there are plenty of others who are preparing to receive him, fortifying themselves against his invasion or preparing a fitting welcome, as the case may be.

Naturally, nobody wants to take a chance with this skillful archer without plenty of others present to help deflect his flying arrows, so there will be parties, parties, and then more parties.

First, a Valentine party calls for a clever form of invitation. A verse—original if possible—could set forth the wish of the hostess in an appropriate jingle, running something like this:

I beg to invite that a gay little sprite,
Will stop at my home on St. Valentine's night.
Can you meet him at eight, on this special date,
I'm expecting you over so please don't be late.

Another invitation might read:

On Saint Valentine's Day
Will you come to my party?
I'll see that you have
A welcome right hearty.

The verse can be written on dainty Valentine postcards, or correspondence cards ornamented with Cupids and arrows or with red heart seals.

Another verse may invite the guest in this wise:

The Sign-of-the-Heart is pleased to invite
Your presence at eight on Saint Valentine's Night;
Hearts that are brave and loving and true
Will be ready and waiting to welcome you.
The password is Love, which alone has the power
To gain you admittance to Cupid's bower.

Note paper decorated with Valentine seals could be used for this form of invitation. For a decoration to conform to the first line of the verse, an immense red heart, hung against the glass of the front door would be appropriate.

Old-fashioned valentines, with lace paper and sentimental verses, make appropriate invitations. So do the old comics.

The valentine party rarely takes the form of a masquerade, but the hostess usually plans caps and favors for the guests, to give a festive air to the event.

Almost any crude cap of crepe paper can be made highly decorative by adding long tassels or fringe at either side.

Heavy necklaces of cardboard with a ruffle of red crepe paper hung about the neck on a ribbon are effective and easily made.

The jazz bracelet is a novelty consisting of a ribbon to be worn about the wrist, with long red and white crepe paper streamers.
